Who we are

- We are the UK's leading anti-fraud charity and voice of the counter fraud community.
- We work to improve fraud resilience across the UK and around the world by championing best practice and (where appropriate) law reform.
- Our members cover the full spectrum of counter fraud professionals.

Working together to defeat fraud

Phishing for information

- Millions of phishing emails are sent each day
- Now the most common breach affecting UK businesses
- Impersonate well-known and trusted companies – banks, internet companies, online retailers and government departments
- Sometimes genuine suppliers or even your own CEO
- Trick recipient into disclosing information or downloading malware

CEO fraud – the hallmarks

- Targets new or junior employees
- Usually in finance
- Sense of urgency or time pressures
- Friday nights or just before office closing times
- Email 'looks' genuine
- Follow up emails to make sure that transaction has been completed

CEO fraud – how to prevent

- Educate all staff (not just finance teams)
- Create a process for staff to verify contact from their CEO or other senior staff (perhaps two points of contact)
- Always review financial transactions for inconsistencies/errors
- Limit the amount of information you share online – especially on social media
- Keep anti-virus software up to date

Invoice fraud – how to prevent

- Be vigilant – check for irregularities (details and amounts)
- Independently verify ‘change of account’ requests
- Inform suppliers when invoices are paid
- Have designated points of contact with suppliers
- Check bank statements regularly and report suspicious debits to your bank
- Don’t list your suppliers on your website.

FRAUD
PANEL

Don't pay the ransom

Access to your files may not be restored

Remember that you're dealing with criminals. You could end up in a situation where you've paid the ransom but access to your files hasn't been restored.

You may be targeted again

Paying a ransom only highlights that you're vulnerable to ransomware attacks. It's possible for criminals to leave a "backdoor" installed on your device which can later be used to re-infect it.

You're funding organised criminals

By paying the ransom, you're putting money into the hands of criminals who will use it to commit further crimes. As long as ransomware remains lucrative, criminals will continue using it.
